Scholarship Background:

Maison was a remarkable little boy who lived his life everyday with purpose. He was kind, generous, funny, and respectful. He loved everyone. His passions included being outdoors and playing soccer. He played soccer from the age of three years old up until he passed at the age of eight and a half. Maison's soccer teammates weren't just on his team, they were his classmates and friends he had known for many years. Maison loved playing soccer not only because he loved the sport, but he loved being with his friends. He worked hard at being the best he could be on the field. Maison not only wanted to be a better soccer player, but he also wanted to help his teammates be their best. Being a good teammate was one of Maison's best qualities.
